THE DEVIL'S KICKERS

SYNOPSIS

Moritz loves football and his football club more than anything else in the world. Together with his father, the club's trainer, he spends as much of his free time as possible on the football field. After his parents split up, Moritz and his mom have to move away and in with his bad-tempered grandfather. To make things even worse, the only football club in the new town arrogantly refuses to let Moritz join them. But a true kicker never gives up.

At his new school, Moritz meets Alex and his cool rooftop gang, who race through the streets and play streetsoccer using everything around them as an obstacle course. Among them are Niko, the two brothers Mehmet and Enes, and Catrina, who may be a girl but makes every penalty shot. Moritz convinces the gang to form a new football team: The Devil's Kickers.

With their avant-garde style, they create a buzz in the local football scene. Even Moritz's grandfather is impressed. A passionate footballer in his younger years, he takes it upon himself to become their trainer.

Just before their big game is to begin, where they will face their fiercest rival, The Devil's Kicker's nerves are on edge. But together they can make it, anywhere, anytime...

THE DIRECTOR

London native Granz Henman studied creative writing and animation at New York University and English literature at Trinity College in Dublin. He wrote his first screenplay (DER EISBÄR) in 1998, which he directed alongside Til Schweiger. He then wrote the script to the teen comedy HARTE JUNGS (2000), whose sequel, KNALLHARTE JUNGS (2002), he directed as well. In 2007 Henman wrote the script to PORNORAMA and KEIN BUND FÜRS LEBEN. He also directed the latter film, a comedy on the Germany Army.
